

ENERGY SECURITY is NOT NEGOTIABLE

While Climate Change alarmists fear a future scenario of rising sea levels, millions of Canadians fret about the very real and present rise in the cost of living. Public policy makers would be wise to keep this in mind.

THE BEDROCK OF MODERN CIVILIZATION.

ENERGY SECURITY is defined as the availability of reliable and affordable energy for everyone. It is as essential to modern life as a stable source of income. However, it is threatened by poor public policy. This presents a real and present danger because EVERYTHING IS AFFECTED:

FUEL COSTS affect home and workplace heating, and the fuelling of our vehicles, machinery and power tools.

FUEL COSTS affect all electronics that are powered by electricity from gas-fuelled energy generation plants and nuclear power stations.

FUEL COSTS affect farming, food storage, food processing, food packaging and distribution, food products warehousing, and food retailing.

FUEL COSTS affect all jobs which depend on energy security to remain viable.

FUEL COSTS affect public services such as policing, operating hospitals and clinics, and delivering government education. These services, and more, are all funded by taxpayers and public debt which have crept up over that past five decades to challenge the very idea of “sustainability”.

“DO AS I SAY, NOT AS I DO”.

Surely Climate Change alarmists have STOPPED: driving their vehicles, operating power tools or heating their homes, right? Have they also STOPPED buying their food from grocery stores which are supplied by a string of supply chain businesses?

What proportion of Climate Change alarmists have STOPPED receiving public services to protest the burning of fossil fuels?

How many Climate Change alarmists have STOPPED working in jobs that depend on Energy Security?

Justin Trudeau is a Climate Change alarmist. Has he offered to shut down the federal government because it is a major greenhouse gas producer? Perhaps he has considered operating it exclusively on Green Energy. Should Justin offer to resign from his job to atone for all of the greenhouse gases that have been emitted under his authority?

The righteous attitude of a typical Climate Change alarmist is off the charts of hypocrisy. They often come across as virtue-signalling autocrats who seeks to leverage political power to control the choices and freedoms of everyone else. In effect, they try to make EVERYONE PAY for their Climate Change fears.

It is not healthy for people to live in fear of greenhouse gases. Perpetual anxiety weakens the human immune system. After the extreme fear messaging experienced by everyone during the recent pandemic, the last thing anyone needs is to compromise their health by enduring a very treatable psychological condition.

Children should never be exposed to fear-inducing issues over which they have no control. It's bad enough that adults are placed in the same situation, but at least they can vote for their government representatives and possess enough education and live experience to process threatening information. Where is the public policy that protects children from potential "climate crisis" neuroses?
